Dear Colleague,

If you are new to TPR, start with a solid understanding by reading my book, Learning Another Language Through Actions and Ramiro Garcia’s Instructor’s Notebook: How to apply TPR for best results.

To ensure success, pretest a few lessons before you enter your classroom. Try the lessons out with your children, your friends or your neighbors. In doing this, you (a) become convinced that TPR actually works, (b) build self-confidence in the approach, and (c) smooth out your delivery.

For Students of All Ages, including Adults

This catalog is loaded with activities that will keep your students excited day after day as they move towards fluency in the target language.

Best wishes for continued success!

Brand New Book! Take a fresh look at Algebra with Dr. Asher!

Let’s Make Sense of Algebra!

Includes "Plato’s Algebra"
~ the new, powerful algebra so simple, a child can understand!

James J. Asher, Ph.D.

Dedicated to...
- every person who ever struggled with algebra, especially those convoluted word problems,
- parents helping their kids with algebra homework, and
- teachers who work hard trying to convince students that algebra is worthwhile.

New discovery revealed: Plato’s Algebra

So simple, a child can understand! So powerful, it could replace traditional algebra that we all endured in school. The most exciting discovery in the history of mathematics!

Dr. James J. Asher, an industrial psychologist, served on the faculty of San Jose State University in San Jose, California for almost 40 years. He was honored as Outstanding Professor for his talent in making complex math concepts understandable to students terrified of mathematics. His breakthrough research in stress-free learning of multiple languages, the Total Physical Response, is known worldwide to language educators as TPR.

From years of investigating how the human brain works in learning, he concluded that every student can understand, in the very first exposure, any complex mathematical or scientific concept, if the instructor throws the ball so that the student can catch it. And when students catch the ball on the first pitch, they have the optimal chance for long-term retention. The secret is pitching the instructional ball to the right side of the brain. You will discover how this works in this book.

Students who drop out of school are not stupid.
They are smart enough to know that “school” is not meeting their needs. And you know what? The kids are right: The traditional school does not work for 1/3 to 1/2 of our students.

Our schools teach facts but they don’t teach life skills such as how to balance a checkbook, repair a toaster, cook an egg, or how to go on a date.
Nothing is included in The Super School of the 21st Century that does not contribute to future adult work or gracious adult living. Must reading for presidential advisors of every industrial nation! Use this book to inspire and guide your PTA and school board in a new direction.

Dear Colleague:

Language instructors often say to me, “I tried the TPR lessons in your book and my students responded with great enthusiasm, but what can the students do at their seats?”

Here are effective TPR activities that students can perform at their seats. Each student has a kit in full color, such as the interior of a kitchen. Then you say in the target language, “Put the man in front of the sink.” With your kit displayed so that it is clearly visible to the students, you place the man in the kitchen of your kit and your students follow by performing the same action in their kits.

As items are internalized, you can gradually discontinue the modeling. Eventually, you will utter a direction and the students will quickly respond without being shown what to do.

Each figure in the TPR Student Kits™ will stick to any location on the playboard without glue. Just press and the figure is on. It can be peeled off instantly and placed in a different location over and over.

You can create fresh sentences that give students practice in understanding hundreds of useful vocabulary items and grammatical structures. Also, students quickly acquire “function” words such as up, down, on, off, under, over, next to, in front of, and behind.

To guide you step-by-step I have written ten complete lessons for each kit (giving you about 200 commands for each kit design), and those lessons are now available in your choice of English, Spanish, French, German, or Dutch.

Use the transparencies with an overhead projector to flash a playboard on a large screen. Your students listen to you utter a direction in the target language, watch you perform the action on the large screen, and then follow by performing the same action in their Student Kits.

Best wishes for continued success,

[Signature]

P.S. My sister and I recently tried one of the Student Kits with a native speaker of Arabic giving directions. We were both surprised at how much vocabulary and grammar we picked up in only a few minutes of play.

Try this with any language you would like to acquire from Turkish to Chinese to Hebrew. It is simple, fast-moving, and it works!

Strategy for Second Language Learning

Your students can enjoy the thrill of achieving basic fluency in one or more languages if they remain in the program long enough. The problem is they “give up” too soon.

A solution in full color
You will see adults of all ages from 17 to 60 understanding everything the instructor is saying in German. Within five minutes of the first class meeting, the faces of the adults reveal that they are convinced they can actually learn German. After only a few weeks, students are ready to reverse roles and give directions in German. You will be entertained with their directions in German that have the instructor standing on a table and sitting in a corner. You will be impressed because you are witnessing the students actually thinking in the target language.

The grand climax
You will see the smooth transition from understanding German to speaking, reading, and writing within eight weeks. Time lapse photography will show you in 60 seconds, one student’s progress through the entire course from zero understanding of German to conversational skill.

Show this full color video to your students
Instructors worldwide in all languages use this video to prepare their students to participate in the exciting TPR experience.

A bonus
As a bonus, we will include a copy of the original research article published in the Modern Language Journal that documents the significant achievement of the adults you will see in the video.

Strategy for Second Language Learning (Order # 407-DVD) $25.00

Produced by James J. Asher • DVD • Color • 19 minutes • Narrated in English
The secret of a successful language program is to inspire students to continue year after year. This video will demonstrate how to motivate your students ages 17 to 60.

You will see that students are silent as they act in response to directions in Spanish starting with single words that expand within minutes into complex sentences. Notice the surprise on their faces as they realize they understand everything the instructor is saying in an alien language.

From understanding to speaking, reading, and writing

After several weeks, you will see that there comes a time when the students are ready to talk. This will happen spontaneously. They ask to reverse roles and give directions in Spanish to the instructor and classmates.

Next, you will see students, working in pairs, creating skits that are more entertaining than any stand-up comedian. Watch carefully because now you will see students actually thinking in the target language. You will also see a graceful transition to speaking, reading, and writing.

For 20 years, Ramiro Garcia has successfully applied the Total Physical Response in his high school and adult language classes.

Four NEW Chapters in the Triple Expanded 4th Edition (288 pages):
• Speaking, Reading, and Writing
• How to Create Your Own TPR Lessons.
More than 200 TPR scenarios for beginning and advanced students.
• TPR Games for all age groups.
• TPR Testing for all skills including oral proficiency.

In this illustrated book, Ramiro shares the tips and tricks that he has discovered in using TPR with hundreds of students. No matter what language you teach, including ESL and the sign language of the deaf, you will enjoy this insightful and humorous book.

Dear Colleague,

You recall that I introduced graphics in the Instructor’s Notebook: How To Apply TPR For Best Results. Hundreds of teachers tried the graphics with their students in many different languages including ESL and were excited to discover that students of all ages thoroughly enjoyed working with the material.

Your students understand a huge chunk of the target language because you used TPR. Now, with my new graphics book, you can follow up with 300 drawings on tear-out strips and sheets that help your students zoom ahead with more vocabulary, grammar, talking, reading, and writing in the target language. In this book, you will receive step-by-step guidance in how to apply the graphics effectively with children and adults acquiring any language, including ESL.

As an extra bonus, you will discover how to use the graphics to test the achievement of your students in comprehension, speaking, reading, and writing. In fact, I provide you with 60 multiple-choice graphic tests for beginning and intermediate students.

Best wishes for continued success,

Ramiro Garcia

Ramiro’s brand-new companion book to the Instructor’s Notebook!

To see Ramiro demonstrating TPR with his students, go to YouTube and type in Ramiro Garcia.
TPR Bingo was created by Ramiro Garcia, author of the best-selling book, “Instructor’s Notebook.” In 30 years of applying the Total Physical Response in his high school and adult Spanish classes, TPR Bingo is the game that students want to play over and over.

TPR Bingo comes with complete step-by-step directions for playing the game, rules for winning, 40 playboards (one side for beginners and the reverse side for advanced students), a master caller’s board with 100 pictures, chips, and caller-cards in your choice of English, Spanish, French or German. As Ramiro says, “Try this game with your students. You will love it!”

Here’s how TPR Bingo works: You call out a direction in the target language such as “The man opens the door.” Students listen to the utterance, search for a matching picture and if it is on their playboard, cover it with a chip. Order the game in English, Spanish, French or German.

When students listen to the instructor utter directions in the target language, they are internalizing comprehension. But, as they advance in understanding, individual students will ask to play the role of the caller which gives students valuable practice in reading and speaking. Incidentally, as students play TPR Bingo, they internalize numbers in the target language from 1 through 100.

Look, I Can Talk More!©
Original Student Book for Level 2

Once again Blaine uses his exciting technique of blending physical actions with interesting story lines to get the students talking, reading, and writing. This second series of stories continues to build vocabulary while focusing on more advanced grammatical concepts common to second year language classes (i.e., use of infinitives, reflexive verbs, direct and indirect object pronouns, preterite vs. imperfect, etc.)

Students are excited to tell stories and create their own!

TPR IS MORE THAN COMMANDS — AT ALL LEVELS

Contee Seely & Elizabeth Romijn
Winner of the Excellence in Teaching Award

Explodes myths about the Total Physical Response:

Myth 1: TPR is limited to commands.

Myth 2: TPR is only useful at the beginning of language acquisition.

Demonstrates how you can use Professor James Asher’s approach—

✔ to overcome problems typically encountered in the use of TPR,
✔ to teach tenses and verb forms in any language in 6 ways,
✔ to teach grammar, idioms, and fluent discourse in a natural way, and
✔ to help your students tell stories that move them into fluent speaking, reading, and writing.

Shows you how to go from zero to correct spoken fluency with TPR.

Dear Colleague,

At my high school we were disappointed that only 30 percent of the students enrolled in either Spanish or French, and student interest faded after one or two years.

We were determined to transform our foreign language offering into an award-winning program, but how to do it? Well, after many years of trial and error, my colleagues and I developed some very simple TPR Strategies that worked beautifully!

The demand for foreign languages exploded so much that our school added Russian, Italian, German and Japanese! A remarkable turnaround for any school.
Dear Colleague:

I want to share with you the TPR Lessons that my high school and college students have thoroughly enjoyed and retained for weeks—even months later. My book has...

- A script you may follow step-by-step including a list of props needed to conduct each class.
- A command format that students thoroughly enjoy. (Students show their understanding of the spoken language by successfully carrying out the commands given to them by the instructor. Production is delayed until students are ready and feel comfortable.)
- Grammar taught implicitly through the imperative.
- Tests for an evaluation of student achievement.

Prize-Winning!
COMPREHENSION BASED LANGUAGE LESSONS
by Margaret S. Woodruff, Ph.D.

Here are detailed lesson plans for 60 hours of TPR Instruction that make it easy for novice instructors to apply the total physical response approach at any level. The TPR lessons include

- Step-by-step directions so that instructors in any foreign language (including ESL) can apply comprehension training successfully.
- Competency tests to be given after the 10th and 30th lessons.
- Pretested short exercises—dozens of them to capture student interest.
- Many photographs

We have printed the lessons in two languages — English and German, but we have charged you only the cost of printing a single language.

Comments from instructors around the world!

I’m a raving maniac about TPR! I have used it for 12 years with success, success, success... helping children and high school students acquire Spanish. If I was going to learn another language, please, please present it to me in a TPR format. — M. Pust, Glendale, Arizona USA

I was keen to know what the famous TPR was, so I ordered the most material I could buy at that time. I must confess that I devoured all your books. My copy of Dr. Asher’s Learning Another Language Through Actions is well-worn because I read it at least six times; each time I pick up something new. I simply do not know how to thank you. My life has turned 180 degrees; I think I am one of your biggest fans.
— Jim Martinez, Brazil

I spent 14 years teaching Spanish, French, and Russian in a public high school here in Washington State using TPR... I can state with no hesitation or reservations that this is the BEST strategy for getting beginners into a language effortlessly—and it works with ALL age groups, including adults. As people progress, they need a variety of approaches, but at no time in their learning does TPR cease to be effective. Frankly, I think we ought to be teaching a wide variety of subjects with TPR—including English to native speakers!
— L. Zink de Diaz, Mountlake Terrace, Washington USA

I would like to thank you for the marvelous teaching experience you have enabled for me through TPR... The very flexibility of the TPR approach allows me to customize each lesson to my students’ goals.
— M. Ares, Lecherias, Edo Anzoategui (Venezuela)

I run a private school in Japan for 480 students and English is acquired with the ease of cutting through butter when lessons are presented with TPR. No wonder I have attended every TPR workshop anywhere in the world presented by Dr. James J. Asher, the originator of the Total Physical Response approach.
— A. Haruyama, Kanagawa, Japan
